9:15 am – 9:30 am – Welcome

9:30 am – 10:30 am - Why Settling Construction Disputes Costs Too Much and How to Get Better Results

Paul M. Lurie, Partner, Construction Law Group, Schiff Hardin LLP

Harold Coleman, Jr., Esq., Senior Vice President, American Arbitration Association (AAA).

An explanation of the Guided Choice System for dispute resolution. The session will discuss why most construction disputes are settled before a judgment or award, yet the cost to reach the point of settlement is often unreasonably expensive and time consuming.

10:30 am – 11:30 am - Level of Development (LOD) Specification -- a Redefinition of Construction Contract BIM Deliverables

Ronald F. Dellaria, Chief Compliance Officer, Astorino Brian Skripac, Director of Digital Practice, Astorino Andy Burg, Operations Technology Services Executive at Messer Construction Company

Deborah S. Griffin, Attorney Holland & Knight LLP

Nobody benefits if everybody has a different idea about how much information should go into each element of a Building Information Model (BIM) or for what uses those models are suitable. The recently published Level of Development (LOD) Specification will allow everyone using BIM to accurately define what will go into a model and prescribe its intended uses based on the completeness of its content. During this session, a panel of experts from the design, construction and legal fields will provide their insight to how the LOD Specification will allow model authors to define what their models can be relied on for and allow other users to understand the value, and limitations, of models they receive. This effort will be critical in moving the building industry forward, furthering the adoption and promised business value of BIM.
